

XXXII Baltic Conference on the History and Philosophy of Science

10–12 June 2026, Rīga, Latvia

The Baltic Conference on the History and Philosophy of Science, first convened in Rīga in 1958, will return here in June 2026 for its 32nd meeting.

Time: Wednesday 10 - Friday 12 June 2026

Topic: Making and Remaking Science

Venue: TBC

The 2026 Baltic Conference on the History and Philosophy of Science explores how science has been made, remade, and transformed in the Baltics across different political regimes and historical periods. While the post-Second World War restructuring of science under Soviet rule forms an important focus of the conference, the theme invites contributions addressing earlier and later transitions, local adaptations, and comparative perspectives from the wider Baltic Sea region, including the Nordic countries.

We welcome papers examining how scientific knowledge, practices, and communities change as they move across borders, institutions, and ideological frameworks - whether imported, adapted, or newly invented.

A more detailed announcement, including the registration schedule, abstract submission guidelines, and conference fees, will be published in early 2026. Please share this information with colleagues for whom the history and philosophy of science may be of interest.

Welcome to Rīga - we hope to see you here in June 2026!
